National Panhellenic Conference Announces Partnership with National Charity League

INDIANAPOLIS — The National Panhellenic Conference (NPC) announced today a new partnership with the National Charity League, Inc. \(NCL\), an organization that fosters relationships between mothers and their daughter's (ages 12 to 18) through community service, leadership development and cultural experiences.

“The National Charity League is dedicated to empowering women, inspiring social awareness and supporting local communities,” said NPC Chairman Carole J. Jones. “Working with an organization whose values align so closely to NPC’s allows us to combine our efforts to find new and creative ways to support women and our local communities.”

As a first step in this new partnership, NPC will be participating as a sponsor and exhibitor at the National Charity League Annual Leadership Conference, which will take place virtually April 16-17, 2021. As an exhibitor, NPC will be engaging with attendees and sharing information about the Panhellenic sorority experience.

“Exhibiting at the National Charity League Annual Leadership Conference allows NPC to connect with new audiences and share information about sorority membership with college bound young women and their caregivers,” said Dani Weatherford J.D., NPC chief executive officer. “We look forward to growing our partnership with the National Charity League and continuing to find ways to support the missions of both our organizations.”
